

Anarchist library
Anti-Copyright

Joseph Labadie
Holiday Sentiments
1933-32

Retrieved on August 19, 2010 from anarvist.freeshell.org
Detroit.

en.anarchistlibraries.net

Holiday Sentiments

Joseph Labadie

1933-32

Freedom.

I long for freedom everywhere, I dream of freedom every day, I talk for freedom here and there. And freedom's aye my muse's lay.

Who Truly Live.

Nor lands, nor flocks, nor gold A noble soul bewitch,
And only those who hold
The graces sweet are rich.

Who work and love and give

Of their abundant store Are they who truly live
And get returned much more.

If You Love Me.

O if you love me tell me so And ease my heart of weighty woe
And with assurance make it glow.

O if you love me tell me, sweet, A love that's dumb is incomplete
And fullest joys thus meet defeat.

O if you love me make me feel That you are helpful,
fond and leal, And that I'm needful to your weal.

If you have flowers for me, dear, Wait not to place them on my bier, . But let their fragrance sooth me here,

O if you love me tell me so In velvet words with accents
low And do the things that make me know.

New Year.

We slip thru time as a ship full sailed

Glides thru an oily sea Full tilt for the grave, the port unknown Unknown the consignee.

Each year goes by as but a day,

We in the dark pursue A hope that makes for Happiness

What I today wish you.